2017 CEW Scholars to Wharton: Leigh O'Neill (NAB) and Jo Dooley (SEEK)

Chief Executive Women (CEW) welcomes home two winners of CEW Scholarships who have recently attended The Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

National Australia Bank's Leigh O'Neill and SEEK'S Jo Dooley completed the two-week Executive Development Program at Wharton in September this year.

Jo and Leigh follow three other accomplished Australian women who have completed the prestigious Executive Development Program at The Wharton School as CEW Scholars: BHP's Jacqui McGill in 2016; HVCC's Kirsten Molloy in 2015; QGC's Cecilia Wake in 2014.

Congratulating the 2017 winners, President of CEW, Kathryn Fagg, said CEW is proud to provide scholarships for talented women to build their leadership skills, enrich their experiences and advance their careers.

"Women hold 21% of ASX200 Executive Leadership positions in 2017. The aim of CEW's Scholarship Program is to provide opportunities to fast-track talented women and improve the representation of women in leadership roles in Australia," said Kathryn Fagg.

"Taking part in the Executive Development Program at Wharton as a CEW scholar was a privilege. I now have a new network of skilled peers and feel inspired by the insights from the faculty and the learning from other industries and geographies. I am truly grateful to CEW for giving me the amazing opportunity, and look forward to paying it forward within our business community and supporting other women," said Leigh O'Neill.

"Learning new concepts together with 55 executives from 17 countries at Wharton was a great opportunity to challenge my own thinking and approach especially in negotiation and decision making. In order to be successful and respond to change, we all need to be infinite learners and make ourselves more adaptable. Wharton helped me to reflect on the fact that we can't rely solely on our previous expertise in solving future problems - but we need to keep learning, unlearning and relearning.

I can see immediately how this course will really help my overall effectiveness as a leader, and prepare me well for more complex roles in the future. I sincerely wish to acknowledge CEW and the companies that support CEW, for this tremendous opportunity and I look forward to continuing to help other women in their careers - particularly in the tech sector," said Jo Dooley.

About the Scholars

Leigh O'Neill - NAB

About the Scholarship

Leigh and Jo participated in the Executive Development Program at The Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, as 2017 CEW Scholars. Wharton is recognised globally for intellectual leadership and ongoing innovation across every major discipline of business education.

The Executive Development Program at Wharton is designed to increase the business skills and leadership capabilities of managers who lead key parts of the business and form the pool of future top leadership of the organisation. It uses a multidimensional approach of lectures, small/large group discussion, case study, role-playing, campus networking opportunities, and a strategy simulation to provide new insights and give participants the opportunities to apply them.
